Unless "Restoring Grace" was written in a weekend. Sloppy. Too much mindless dialogue. Several characters with absolutely no appeal. More than half the dialogue in the book was unnecessary. It did not move the story along. I got the feeling the book was written and then someone - perhaps not even Katie Fforde - padded it with dialogue.

Restoring Grace is about a picture restorer and a wine expert. I already had quite a lot of wine experience but I really wanted to become a picture restorer while doing my research. Two women who agree to live together in a beautiful old house owned by one of them are joined by a troubled teenaged girl who is the step daughter of one of them. I loved the research and putting three very different young women together.
